Bagging Tramps.

It was reported last night that the train men had quite a circus with tramps. It is stated that a gang of these festive individuals went after some freight cars, broke into them, and were regaling themselves with the enjoyments of life—wine and whiskey being particularly predominant. Quite a number are said to have lifted themselves out with boots and shoes, and other articles of use as well as ornament. Their numbers were such as to command respect. It is stated that the train men procured rifles and shotguns, and in a body marched to the cars and surrounded the horney handed tramps, and were successful in the "round up," capturing thirteen of them. Thus saith the rumor.

Mulloy & Paul in their New Stable.

At last Mulloy & Paul, the livery men, have got into their new stable. Though not yet fully at home, it is easy to be seen that the handsome building will shortly look as trim and as neat as the most fastidious could desire. The office is quite large, roomy and pleasant, and will be adorned with four handsome pictures presented by the firm by Mr. S. S. Walker, which are well suited to the place. The first represents the start at the steeple chase at Punchetown, twelve miles out of Dublin, Ireland; the second, shows the leap over the doubled ditch; the third gives the leap over the stone wall, and the fourth is the finish. The names of the riders appear on each picture, so that the relative positions throughout the race may be seen.

The front part of the stable is a large airy room, with an asphaltum floor. The wash house is at the southwest corner, and the harness room adjoins, but opens into the stable proper. That portion of the stable in which the horses are kept forms an angle, the west angle being yet unfinished. The north angle will hold sixty horses, the west forty, so that a man can stand at one point and see that the grooms look after 100 horses. The first thing a person notices is that the stable is warm, and yet well ventilated, and has every appliance and convenience for horses. When the west angle is finished there will be four box stalls, three in the wing just referred to, and one in the north angle. The front part of the stable is two-story, the upper story being connected by means of a fine elevator. This will be used for carriages, which will be taken up and down as needed; while here also will be displayed from fifty to one hundred sets of fine double and single Concord harness, which Mulloy & Paul carry for the purpose of selling, and which they warrant to be first-class. By means of this elevator also, a grain bin with a capacity for three car loads of grain, is reached. Over the stable proper there is a well-built and splendid hay loft, while the stalls are filled with well-kept and well-fed steppers, including the car load recently brought here. Other improvements will take place as fast as possible. Persons who know whereof they speak say that, when completed, in appointments and other features, no superior stable can be found outside of New York.

Mulloy & Paul are willing to receive visits now at their new quarters.

J. K. Gillespie.

Mr. J. K. Gillespie has now opened in his new place of business, immediately north of and adjoining the Walker House. Jim is well known as being one of the most energetic, wide-awake and reliable real estate men in the city. He has almost grown up in the business and understands it thoroughly, and he is well and favorably known to the public, and all who have had any business with him will be glad to learn that he has returned to his old ways and his accustomed walk. He has also opened at the same place a brokers shop, and is prepared to attend to that class of business, either himself or by a most able substitute, who will be found at the place when Jim is away. We are glad to see Mr. Gillespie out again. There is no question but, if honesty, ability and energy can win success—and they always do—his venture will be productive of good results to himself as he could desire.

SHOT AT THE PARK.

"Old Tex." Makes One Durnell Bite the Dust.

Information was received in this city on Monday that a fatal shooting scrape had taken place at Park City on Sunday. Inquiry did not result in the development of extended details, but proved the report to be correct. The man killed was named Durnell, or some say Scott, the former being the general way of putting it, while the individual who did the shooting was named Wilson, but having lived in Texas at one time he was familiarly known as "Old Tex." It is understood that both men were employed at the Ontario Mill. Durnell, according to the story, owed "Tex." some $3, which he had been tardy in paying. "Tex." finally went and had the money held back out of Durnell's wages. On Sunday the men met, one going down the hill the other ascending, and they passed each other. Finally Durnell turned around and started to follow "Tex.", and called on him to halt, which the latter did. They then discussed the $3 matter, and both men became angry. Durnell told "Tex." he would thrash him, and started to put the threat into execution. "Tex." as the story goes, kept walking backward and warned the approaching Durnell to keep off; that he desired no trouble. Durnell, however, continued to advance, and finally "Tex." whipped out his pistol and fired at Durnell. The ball struck him somewhere in the abdomen, and he fell, and subsequently died. The story, as above given was told by different parties, and seems to be generally accepted as correct; and from it, it would appear that "Tex." or Wilson cannot be held to have done an unlawful act.

The ball struck Durnell on the right side of the lower part of the body, penetrated the intestines and lodged in the spine, producing death in about two minutes. At the time of the firing the two men are said to have been about eight feet apart. Tex. went to town and surrendered himself. He was examined on Monday, and waiving examination was committed to jail, and will probably be brought to this city to-day. He is said to be very weak and sickly, and fainted during the examination.

Durnell's body was brought here on Monday. It was accompanied by his young wife and a little and only babe.

THAT CURIOUS CASE.

On Saturday morning the HERALD called attention to an apparent and seeming inexcusable neglect on the part of the coroner of this county in not holding an inquest over the body of Mrs. Rasmussen, the lady found dead in her house in the Eleventh Ward, a week ago last Monday. The coroner previously authorized the News to state that the death was acknowledged to be from paralysis, and the News man did it in a style peculiarly his own. On Friday it was reported that the old lady was still alive, and a HERALD reporter went up to see her. At his request Dr. J. M. Benedict accompanied him, and made as thorough an examination of the case as he could, under the circumstances.

The coroner stated, according to the News, he knew and the neighbors knew she died from paralysis. Dr. J. M. Benedict said she did not. It is the coroner and Dr. Benedict for it, and we leave the public to decide whether the doctor knows what he is talking about. The News on Saturday evening contained a characteristic article from the coroner, in which he refers to the HERALD article, and in which he denies nothing. He does not now insist that death was caused by paralysis, but does insist that death was not occasioned by unlawful means, and hence there was no cause for an inquest. Dr. Benedict says that the apparent cause of death was convulsions, either from natural or unnatural causes; and while he cannot say he is right, he gives it as his opinion that the symptoms were such as would give grounds for the belief that she had died from convulsions caused by taking strychnine, but this cannot be ascertained without an examination of the contents of the stomach. Therefore, whether there is reason to believe anything unlawful was connected with the death we leave the public to decide, and the coroner to convince Dr. Benedict that he does not know what he is talking about.

It may be true the neighbors and the coroner came to the conclusion that there was no foul play. The HERALD reporter was informed that the old lady was anything but cheerful, and had so intimated to neighbors. The coroner, however, may have interviewed different persons from those that the HERALD man met, and this would account for the difference. The HERALD only knows that it acquired its knowledge from a neighbor who was posted.

Biddlecome Sentenced.

On Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, Jos. Biddlecome, the boy who was tried and convicted some time since, for killing a young man named Jensen, in Tooele County, a few years ago, was brought up before Judge Hunter for sentence. When asked if he had any reason to advance why sentence should not be passed upon him, he replied that he was not guilty of the crime. He was then sentenced to the Penitentiary for life. This was done, notwithstanding the verdict that he was guilty of murder in the first degree, because of the recommendation of the jury that he receive the mercy of the court, and this recommendation, under the law, leaves it at the discretion of the judge to sentence him to death or to the Penitentiary for life.
